MANAGING STRESS IN THE WORKPLACE
Stress is a reaction to a basic threat and the basic threat is the perceived inability to cope.

The reaction to stress is a unique personal experience, triggered by our unique personal perception of the world.

The perception factor is that mysterious variable that can often make “one man’s poison another man’s pleasure”.

How we perceive life is so often determined by the way we perceive ourselves. Reality is not made for us, but by us.
The manner in which you choose to interpret, react to and handle a perceived stress can very often be far more damaging to you than the actual stress could ever be on its own.

Men are disturbed not by the things that happen, but by their opinion of the things that happen.

Greek Philosopher – Epictetus

Our goal is not to eliminate stress but to learn how to manage and use it to help us.
Seven-Step Anxiety Plan

Step 1 Identify the anxiety.
Why do I worry? – Look behind the anxiety and you might find the real worry.

Step 2 What are the benefits of worrying? - List all the benefits you can think of for worrying, and then list all the negatives.

Step 3 The Universe only rewards action – List all the possible actions you could administer to counteract your anxiety.

Step 4 Appropriate actions abate worry.

Step 5 Which of my actions is the most appropriate? - Develop a plan of priorities of tackling your problem.

Step 6 What action can I be achieving, now? - Fear of the future can deny the power the present. Attending to your anxiety can only begin at one moment, and that moment is now.
